Look for these details:

Proposition 27, which would have allowed online sports betting, appears headed for a historic and crushing defeat.

It drew the support of three tribes but fierce opposition from more than 50 tribes and tribal organizations.

That was reflected in how tribes spent their advertising dollars, said Jacob Me ija, vice president of public affairs for the Pechanga Band of Indians, one of the tribes that supported the in-person measure and opposed the online proposition.

So, come to the table willing to hear us out, and, most likely, come to the table willing to accept the terms that we are proposing.

One is to go through the whole ballot measure process, drafting an initiative, gathering signatures, and, if everything goes well, getting it onto the ballot.

And it's not clear that tribes - if they were to advance another proposal - agree on the approach.

"The tribes can wait forever.

"Maybe take a step back on California for a moment, allow things to settle,

so you can reset," he added.
