Judge.me has more 5-star user reviews than any other app on the marketplace (more than TripAdvisor) and is available in 37 languages. And, it enables stores to display carousel ratings, store and product ratings, and trust badges. Users can also share product reviews on social media, rich snippets, and Google Shopping. Rivo is a free app that gives users the opportunity to display photo reviews in a customizable, on-page widget. The design is elegant and tasteful, which makes it an awesome tool for product page UGC. If you want to display a modern, on-page popup form to collect reviews, this might be the right pick.

Some users have said that star ratings are not enabled on the product grid display, which might be caused by an incompatibility with certain themes. While the app advertises Google shopping reviews, some users claim that their reviews aren't showing in search results. Other unsatisfied users would like to see more language options.

If you haven't already started down this path, you're going to need store reviews in addition to product reviews. For one, if people can see that you have happy customers, they're more likely to trust you. Next, search engines like to see your brand and your domain listed on multiple sites.

II. Niche Directories

What are you selling? Now, which directories list resources and stores like yours? Make sure that your brand and store are listed in them - choose at least the top three niche directories and submit a listing with your logo, store description, and a link back to your website.
