In many states, that windfall has fallen short. programs - in short, a whole lot of sports to bet on. Some states, including New York and New Hampshire, ignored the industry's advice and installed the highest tax rates on betting. They have seen bets placed at a higher rate per capita than many low-tax states

That amount is half of all the state tax revenues on sports betting nationwide.

Little oversight

Many of the states also allowed the gambling industry to give out hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of tax-free bets to gamblers, essentially marketing the industry.

Arizona sports betting operators alone gave out $205 million in free bets. The promotions were one example of how regulators were outmatched in trying to oversee the industry as it grew so rapidly.
