Before placing your bet, you must decide which game to bet on, the team you want, the number of points you believe will be scored, and how much money you're willing to wager.

The favorite is listed with a minus followed by a number.

The average over/under in the NFL is between 35 and 47 points.

Straight Bets The most common type of bet made regarding the game of football is known as a straight bet.

If a team is a favorite at -300, that would mean that to win $100, you would have to bet $300.

However, winning two of three games in a parlay would equal a loss instead of a potential profit if you were to place three individual straight bets.

Point spreads, point totals, and moneylines are types of bets commonly used for half and quarter bets.

The most famous way to place a football bet is at an in-person sportsbook.
