Making that big call can take some time, but with the help of a blackjack strategy, you can cut that down and improve your likelihood of success.

One of the worst case scenarios is when the dealer has an ace.

If the dealer's card is a 10-value-card, you still need a strong hand.

An ace gives you a good chance of making 21 with a hit.

When a dealer has a seven, eight or nine card it is impossible for them to make a blackjack, so your chances increase.

However, it is best to stand if the dealer has a seven, 10 or ace.

When you boil the game down to its simplest form you may think it is easy all you have to do is make sure you reach 21.

Before starting, it is best to take into account the table's minimum bet and we look for the lowest minimum stake you can find in order to maximise your exposure sure to blackjack, but also limiting any potential losses as you learn the game.

Counting Cards

Besides being quite difficult, card counting is effective only under very specific circumstances connected to the number of decks in play and how often the dealer shuffles them.

and don't forget to read the terms and conditions and wagering requirements
