Starting Your Group

Facebook also recently added Facebook Stars where group members and fans can show their love and support for your on-demand videos, Facebook Live, and more (e) Tj T* BT

Paid partnerships are a great way to monetize a Facebook group, but it does come with a sizeable amount of guidelines. In order to be compliant with the many paid partnership policies, those interested in pursuing this avenue of making money must:

It's a simple way to monetize a Facebook group without being too cringey about it. If you like a product or service, check to see if there is an affiliate link that you can begin sharing with your online community. I would suggest utilizing an Amazon affiliate account and pointing your audience to "great deals" on photography-related equipment and resources.

What is great is you can always repurpose your live stream videos - so you can generate money and continue to utilize the asset long after you've created it.

You can also create ads from your repurposed live streams to boost the amount you make, or use these at the beginning of your sales funnel to make more money off of full video courses.

The first step is to start your group. If you're nervous about randomly adding people, send a private message to personal contacts that you know to make them aware of what you are doing and start to build support from your own network. Keep your niche dialed in and define who your target audience is.

All these sportsbooks are based out-of-state and accept GA players: Once you've found your sport of choice, you can choose from tons of prop betting options alongside your standard wagers.
