Those behind the ballot measures are figuring out their next steps. Proposition 27, which would have allowed online sports betting, appears headed for a historic and crushing defeat. In general, support for initiatives tends to decline as an election draws near. Voters who saw lots of those ads opposed the measures at higher rates than people who saw few or none, the UC Berkeley polling found. The propositions, themselves, were complex, and weren't singularly focused on sports betting. There are two ways either group - or anyone else - could try again to legalize sports betting. Votes for this year's election are still being counted, so any campaign for the 2024 election may not start for a while. "If we go through this again in two years, it's gonna be the same result," said Pascrell, the gambling lobbyist. 200% second deposit bonus up to $100.
