Nearly every state has at least considered legalizing sports betting, though deep-seated political opposition and complex tribal relationships will likely prevent more than a dozen from going online for years to come.

The full explanation from SportsHandle:

A three-judge panel at the U.S. Supreme Court.

Rep.

"We said, 'Hey New York got it passed, so let's do what they did. Listening to the testimony from Minnesota, sports betting won't move forward until the tracks and the tribes can reach an agreement.

He's the biggest hurdle to getting legalization in the state.
