Now that sports betting and gambling have been legalized in many states, many bettors have questions about their tax obligations and whether they can claim their sports betting losses to offset other income.

This article provides information regarding how to report sports betting winnings and losses on your tax return, what to do if you bet on sports in multiple states, and what to do if you receive a tax form from a sportsbook or gambling company.

However, if you have $5,000 of winnings and $10,000 of losses, you can only deduct $5,000 of losses.

Your state of residency is likely to offer a credit or deduction for the taxes that you paid to the state where you are a nonresident, which allows you to avoid paying taxes on the winnings to two states.

The rules vary from state to state though so it is advisable to check with your tax professional to ensure that you are reporting your out-of-state winnings correctly.
