The earlier the process is identified, the better the chances for a successful recovery.

A gambling compulsion can begin the first time someone places a bet, or it could gradually progress into an addiction over time.

Although you might not get a straight answer and you won't know how someone will react, if you approach someone in a non-confrontational way, you might get some useful information.

Other people might not want to talk because they're ashamed and could become defensive.

Always keep the lines of communication open.
