The last few years have seen the meteoric rise of “superfake” handbags, reports the New York Times, where a wave of Chinese counterfeiters have become very adept at copying bags by Chanel, Gucci, Hermes, Louis Vuitton, and more. One anonymous authenticator admitted to the Times, that the knockoffs “are getting so good, to the point that it comes down to inside etchings, or nine stitches instead of eight,” he said.

“Sometimes you really have no idea, and it becomes a time-consuming egg hunt, comparing photos on other websites and saying, “Does this hardware look like this one?”

“It’s gotten to the point that you can see something in season replicated within that season,” Hunter Thompson, an authenticator for the RealReal consignment site told the Times.

This all comes to the chagrin of the fashion houses that are spending billions to fight counterfeit merchandise.

While the U.

But for the people who want to buy real bags and are instead sold a fake, it’s getting harder for them to make sure they’re getting the genuine article.

That’s why the fashion houses, of course, would prefer it if you just bought directly from them.
