Our next strategy for improving your odds of winning at baccarat is the Fibonacci strategy. This is an entirely different betting system in which you use the Fibonacci sequence to decide what amount to bet after a loss.

Eventually, you will win and make a lot more money than just making up for what you lost.

If that is the case with you, as well, then we suggest that you break down your total bankroll and make sure that each game you approach has its own, separate amount.

This is a good rule for playing the system, and, as we covered at the beginning of this guide, betting with the Banker has the highest chance of seeing success - just over 50%.

Choose the one that is the best for you, as they all work equally well in the hands of fate.

No matter which version you're playing, Aces are worth 1 and 11 points interchangeably.

Split: When you receive two cards of equal rank upon first deal, splitting is an option.

22% to the house edge.

You'll have to choose your actions before the Dealer gets a second card-which could potentially be a Blackjack.
