However, despite the fact that the law permits online sports betting, there are no online sportsbooks in the state, and there is no timeline for their arrival. As a result, only 55 of the state's 64 parishes allow sports betting - the other 9 are subject to geofencing in order to keep inhabitants from betting. There are now more than one dozen sportsbook sites that are active in Michigan. If Tennessee surprised everyone by moving forward with sports betting in the first place, Virginia shocked with how extensive an overhaul of its gambling profile it undertook (and is undertaking).

Some of them seem interested but cannot find an equitable structure for all the stakeholders involved.

Oklahoma does not allow sports betting at this time.

Sports betting is illegal in Vermont.

All seven tracks would have VLTs by November 2014.

Ohio added to its gambling profile in March 2018 with the addition of House Bill 132.

This bill aims "to legalize and regulate sports gaming in this state, to levy a tax on businesses that provide sports gaming, to create a Sports Gaming Advisory Board and to require the State Lottery Commission to make certain lottery games available in Ohio.
